

Araceli Segarra

The First Spanish Woman to Summit Everest

CSA CELEBRITY SPEAKERS

Araceli Segarra is a TV host, an alpinist and star of the IMAX film Everest. She is probably best known as the first Spanish woman to stand on the summit of Everest. She has done more than 30 expeditions around the world. She has climbed alpine Amadablam (Himalaya 6.812m) alone. She has rock climbed el Cap in Yosemite (1.000m verticals), Ice climbed the Pomme d'Or in Canada (400m verticals) and has opened new routes in big walls in Oman, Iran and Mali, besides many other ascents. She has also worked for some publicity brands and modelled for cover magazines.

In detail

Araceli began her prestigious career as one of the world's leading female climbers at the tender age of twenty, when she successfully climbed Mount Kenya, the highest peak on the African continent. Just one year later she organised and played a leading role in her first major expedition to the Himalaya. But her real breakthrough came in 1996 when as part of the Catalan Everest North Face Expedition Team Araceli stood on top of the world.

What she offers you

The multi-faceted, charming and charismatic Araceli is in great demand as a speaker at leading conferences around the globe. She talks in depth about her climbing experiences and compares the physically, mentally, and emotionally strenuous and complicated ascent of a big mountain, and the analogously strenuous and complicated world of business life.

How she presents

Both an experienced media personality and conference presenter Araceli's presentations are highly enjoyable and backed up with dramatic and awe-inspiring images from her expeditions.

Languages

She presents in English, Spanish, Catalan or French.
