"One of the 100 Most Influential Lawyers" California Lawyer magazine and the legal Daily Journal (2006)

In detail

Mr Sewell joined Intel in 1995 as a senior attorney assigned to counsel various business groups in areas such as antitrust compliance, licensing, and intellectual property. In 2001, he was promoted to vice president and deputy general counsel. In that role he managed Intel's litigation portfolio, and handled corporate transactions, including M&A activities. He took over as only the third general counsel in Intel's history in November 2004 and was appointed Senior Vice President in 2005.

What he offers you

Dynamic and focused Bruce Sewell offers audiences valuable insights into the intricate world of corporate responsibility. He also uses his considerable expertise to explain in plain English the legal complexities of intellectual property rights and the ins and outs of international competition issues. He also shows organisations how to create and retain wealth in today's innovation economies.

How he presents

Mr Sewell enjoys using new media (audio and video) in his engaging presentations and dots the landscape with interesting visual aids.
